

CICERONE

WALKING THE SOUTH DOWNS WAY

NATIONAL TRAIL

Winchester to Eastbourne, described in both directions

INCLUDES
1:25,000
ROUTE MAP
BOOKLET

Kev Reynolds
Updated by Ilsa and Richard Moon

THE SOUTH DOWNS WAY

THE SOUTH DOWNS WAY

WINCHESTER TO EASTBOURNE,
DESCRIBED IN BOTH DIRECTIONS

by Kev Reynolds updated by Ilsa and Richard Moon

CICERONE

JUNIPER HOUSE, MURLEY MOSS,
OXENHOLME ROAD, KENDAL, CUMBRIA LA9 7RL
www.cicerone.co.uk

© Kev Reynolds 2023
Fifth edition 2023
ISBN: 978 1 78631 161 0
Fourth edition 2017
Third edition 2015
Second edition 2004
First edition 2001

Printed in China on responsibly sourced paper on behalf of Latitude Press Ltd
A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.
All photographs are by the author.

© Crown copyright 2023
OS PU100012932

This book is for Charlie Moon

Updates to this Guide

While every effort is made by our authors to ensure the accuracy of guidebooks as they go to print, changes can occur during the lifetime of an edition. Any updates that we know of for this guide will be on the Cicerone website (www.cicerone.co.uk/1161/updates), so please check before planning your trip. We also advise that you check information about such things as transport, accommodation and shops locally. Even rights of way can be altered over time. We are always grateful for information about any discrepancies between a guidebook and the facts on the ground, sent by email to updates@cicerone.co.uk or by post to Cicerone, Juniper House, Murley Moss, Oxenholme Road, Kendal LA9 7RL.

Register your book: To sign up to receive free updates, special offers and GPX files where available, create a Cicerone account and register your purchase via the 'My Account' tab at www.cicerone.co.uk.

Front cover: Beachy head lighthouse

CONTENTS

Foreword	7
Trek planner	8
Map keys	9
Route summary table	10

INTRODUCTION	11
The Downs	13
The South Downs Way	16
Accommodation	20
Practical advice	20
Walking companies and baggage transfers	22
Getting there – and back	22
Using the guide	23

TRAIL DESCRIPTION – WESTBOUND

Stage 1	Eastbourne to Alfriston (Footpath route via the Seven Sisters)	27
Stage 1(a)	Eastbourne to Alfriston (Bridleway route inland via Jevington)	36
Stage 2	Alfriston to Southease	44
Stage 3	Southease to Housedean (A27)	50
Stage 4	Housedean (A27) to Pyecombe	55
Stage 5	Pyecombe to Botolphs (Adur Valley)	62
Stage 6	Botolphs to Washington	67
Stage 7	Washington to Amberley	73
Stage 8	Amberley to Cocking	80
Stage 9	Cocking to South Harting	89
Stage 10	South Harting to Buriton (Queen Elizabeth Forest)	96
Stage 11	Buriton to Exton	99
Stage 12	Exton to Winchester	109

TRAIL DESCRIPTION – EASTBOUND

Stage 1	Winchester to Exton	118
Stage 2	Exton to Buriton	124
Stage 3	Buriton to South Harting	132
Stage 4	South Harting to Cocking	136
Stage 5	Cocking to Amberley	140

Stage 6	Amberley to Washington	147
Stage 7	Washington to Botolphs (Adur Valley).	151
Stage 8	Botolphs to Pyecombe	155
Stage 9	Pyecombe to Housedean (A27)	159
Stage 10	Housedean (A27) to Southease	163
Stage 11	Southease to Alfriston	167
Stage 12	Alfriston to Eastbourne (Footpath route via the Seven Sisters)	171
Stage 12(a)	Alfriston to Eastbourne (Bridleway route inland via Jevington)	179
Appendix A	Useful addresses	185
Appendix B	Accommodation along the route	187
Appendix C	Recommended reading	194

FOREWORD

My beloved father, Kev Reynolds, sadly passed away in December 2021. He spent more than 60 years of his life walking trails both home and abroad and has in excess of 50 titles to his name.

Ever since my sister and I were toddlers, our father instilled in us a love for adventure and the outdoors. His sense of wonder in the natural world never ceased. All of our family holidays were spent abroad camping but as a teenager, Pop and I embarked on our first long-distance walk together in the UK – the Dorset Coastal Path. Even at this young age, I became aware of how thorough Pop was when undertaking research for his books. Whatever the weather, he refused to take short cuts and admit defeat. He would regularly walk additional miles even at the end of a very long day in order to check the details he was committing to print were correct. He was a consummate professional and was highly respected within the walking world.

Although Pop walked among some of the highest peaks in the world, he had a deep respect for the countryside in South East England, close to his home. The South Downs Way was particularly close to his heart, and when my husband and I moved nearby, Pop saw this as a perfect opportunity to share his love of the area with us as a family. Our house became a convenient place for a cuppa following a walk on the Downs.

Following his death, my husband Richard and I decided that we would walk the Way ourselves, in order to update it in his absence. And what an amazing adventure that was! We read Pop's words aloud while following his directions and yet again marvelled at the accuracy of his writing. We heard his voice in our heads while reading the anecdotes that made the Way not just a long-distance path, but another one of his many adventures. It is our fervent hope that you will also cherish the days walking the South Downs Way, as we did.

Ilsa Moon

The South Downs Way Trek Planner

Key to Trek Planner

Note: all facilities listed here are subject to change. Check www.nationaltrail.co.uk/south-downs-way before setting off.

- accommodation
- refreshments
- food shop
- public transport

Accommodation = b&b, hotel, guest house, youth hostel. Only those on, or within a mile of, the route are listed. See Appendix B for contact details of a selection of providers.

Food shop = shop or supermarket selling food or drink.

Public transport = On or near a bus or train route. Some services may be weekday only.

Route symbols on OS map extracts (for OS legend see printed OS maps)

- route
- alternative route
- starting point for route east to west
- starting point for route west to east
- route direction

Features on the overview map

- County/Unitary boundary
- Urban area
- National Park eg SOUTH DOWNS
- Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, eg Surrey Hills
- 200m
- 75m
- 0m

See 1:25,000 map booklet for the key to the 1:25,000 maps
 GPX files for all routes can be downloaded free at www.cicerone.co.uk/1161/GPX

ROUTE SUMMARY TABLE

The South Downs Way – westbound
Stage	Start/Finish	Distance (miles/km)	Approx. time	Page
1	Eastbourne to Alfriston via Seven Sisters	10½ (17)	4–5hr	27
1a	Eastbourne to Alfriston (bridleway)	8 (12.5)	3½–4hr	36
2	Alfriston to Southease	7 (11)	3–3½hr	44
3	Southease to Housedean (A27)	6 (9.5)	2½–3hr	50
4	Housedean (A27) to Pyecombe	8½ (13.5)	3½–4hr	55
5	Pyecombe to Botolphs	7½ (12)	3–3½hr	62
6	Botolphs to Washington	7 (11)	3–3½hr	67
7	Washington to Amberley	6 (9.5)	2½–3hr	73
8	Amberley to Cocking	12 (19)	6–7hr	80
9	Cocking to South Harting	7½ (12)	3–3½hr	89
10	South Harting to Buriton (Queen Elizabeth Forest)	3½ (5.5)	1½–2hr	96
11	Buriton to Exton	12 (19)	6–7hr	99
12	Exton to Winchester	12 (19)	6–7hr	109
Total: 99½ miles (158km) or 97 miles (153.5km)

The South Downs Way – eastbound
Stage	Start/Finish	Distance (miles/km)	Approx. time	Page
1	Winchester to Exton	12 (19)	6–7hr	118
2	Exton to Buriton	12 (19)	6–7hr	124
3	Buriton to South Harting	3½ (5.5)	1½–2hr	132
4	South Harting to Cocking	7½ (12)	3–3½hr	136
5	Cocking to Amberley	12 (19)	6–7hr	140
6	Amberley to Washington	6 (9.5)	2½–3hr	147
7	Washington to Botolphs	7 (11)	3–3½hr	151
8	Botolphs to Pyecombe	7½ (12)	3–3½hr	155
9	Pyecombe to Housedean (A2)	8½ (13.5)	3½–4hr	159
10	Housedean to Southease	6 (9.5)	2½–3hr	163
11	Southease to Alfriston	7 (11)	3–3½hr	167
12	Alfriston to Eastbourne via Seven Sisters	10½ (17)	4–5hr	171
12a	Alfriston to Eastbourne (bridleway)	8 (12.5)	3½–4hr	179
Total: 99½ miles (158km) or 97 miles (153.5km)

INTRODUCTION

The start to a bright spring day... striding through a gentle downland valley with the delightful name of Cricketing Bottom, settling into that easy comfortable rhythm so essential to the full enjoyment of a long walk. The early sun warm overhead, my first cuckoo of the year calling from the hillside, the smoky haze of bluebells lining scrub-crowded slopes where the blackthorn produces haloes of flower. Only the pheasants complain. Larks rise singing, and all around swell the Downs. Within less than an hour I'll be on their crest. Within that hour I'll be wandering alone save for the peewits and skylarks and hares, save for the cowslips at my feet and the orchids in the spinneys. Alone with the faintest of breezes and huge views that have the sea gleaming in one direction, and the vast tartan plain of the Weald in the other. Hour upon hour wandering through history, past burial mounds and hill forts left by the first wanderers of this Way, on land that once was covered by sea but is now serenaded day by day by minute specks of birds whose land this really is, on grasslands grazed by slow-moving fluffs of sheep, the close-cropped hillsides darkened now and then by the sweeping shadows of clouds. Cloudshadows – the only impatience on the South Downs Way.

Jevington, midway between Eastbourne and Alfriston

THE SOUTH DOWNS WAY

More than two decades have passed since I first walked the South Downs Way, but I have been back several times, drawn by the visual delights to be won from the crest of this southern backbone of land with its overwhelming sense of space and peace, whose trails seem to wind on for ever – towards a dim, blue, never-to-be-reached, horizon. And each time I tread that smooth baize of turf and look north across the empty Weald, I find it hard to believe that this is the ‘overcrowded’ South of England.

This South is a surprisingly secret land, though its secrets are there to be unravelled if one only cares to look. It is misjudged and often maligned, and walking through and across it is the only way properly to discover its truths, for by wandering these ancient footpaths one absorbs its essence through the soles of the feet. The cyclist and horse rider will also develop an affinity with the land, but without the direct physical contact known by the walker, a unique part of the experience will be missing.

Along the South Downs Way your field of vision expands with the miles to a greater knowledge of the land. The traveller begins to appreciate that it is not so populous as is generally thought, that its countryside is infinitely more varied than might previously have been considered possible of the lowlands, and when you gain the scarp edge it is the panoramic expanse which throws into disarray any preconceived notion that mountains have a monopoly of landscape grandeur. Here the perspective fits. Scale is adjusted and beauty comes from order. In a world of constant change there is something reassuring in a vast acreage of countryside that somehow survives without too many scars – another eye-opener for the Rambler in the South.

The view from Firle Beacon

There are other surprises too, but these must be left for the wanderer, cyclist and horse rider to discover for him or herself, for along the South Downs Way any journey is bound to be full of rewards. Journeys of delight, journeys of discovery.

None but the walker can possibly understand the full extent of that statement, for it is only by the slowing of pace that one finds the ability to become part of the landscape itself. This is not something that may be achieved from the seat of a motor vehicle, for motoring divorces you from the land, and at a speed which blurs and distorts. Along country footpaths, however, there is so much to experience – from the succession of soil types beneath your feet to the nuance of every breeze that plays sculptor to the passing clouds. One breathes the fragrance of wayside plants, discovers the life of hedgerow and woodland shaw, and drifts through an unfolding series of panoramas. With senses finely tuned to the world about you, a footpath becomes a highway of constant discovery, of constant delight.

THE DOWNS

In the distant mists of time, during what is known as the Cretaceous period – that is, from about 100 million to 70 million years ago – the land we now know as the Weald lay beneath the waters of a warm,

Celandines bank the trails with gold in April and May

The quintessential South Downs – on Hyden Hill above the Meon Valley

shallow sea whose bed was covered by a sandwich of sedimentary deposits. Miniscule shell-bearing organisms settled on this bed, the pure calcium carbonate of their shells powdering to a chalk dust that built with staggering patience to a depth of just one foot every 30,000 years or so. (Consider the time-scale required to produce the chalk cliffs of Beachy Head – over 500 feet/150m deep!) Yet this layer of soft crumbling chalk, composed of all these tiny shells, stretched from the Thames Valley to the Pas de Calais, and reached a depth of around 1000feet/300m, while into this white cheese-like rock there also settled the skeletons of sea sponges to form hard seams of flint.

Then, about 20 million years ago during the Tertiary period, came the continental collision which built the Alps. Italy was thrust into Europe and Spain was pressured from the south. Mountains were slowly buckled and, as with a stone tossed into a pond, ripples spread in all directions. The chalk of southern England was raised into a huge dome rising from the sea and stretching for about 125 miles (200km), end to end. Weathering followed – a process that continues to this day. Rain, ice, frost, all combined to nibble away at this dome, aided and abetted by rivers and streams that found a weakness when the chalk cracked as it buckled. The outer edges of the dome were the last to crumble, the central core being carried away in watercourses that flowed through it. The centre of that lost dome is now the Weald, the outer edges the North and South Downs.

Rivers and streams continue to drain the Weald, breaching the Downs in valleys far broader than they now require, while dry knuckle coombs within the heart of this downland tell of streams that no longer exist.

Rambling along the smoothly rounded South Downs today we may wonder at this triumph of geological history. Gazing from the clifftop at Beachy Head we see the body of the land exposed, carved through as though with a gigantic scarpel. We gaze into the heart of unfathomable time, at the crushed, bleached remnants of creatures whose sacrifice is our gain.

THE DOWNS

East of the coastline, as the route of the South Downs Way leads away from the sea, that sacrifice is forgotten as we amble across grasslands rich in wild flowers. Yet beneath our boots the chalk lies deep, waiting only for the plough to expose its weaknesses to the wind. Where the path leads through arable land we see polished flints littering the fields, the chalk cushion around them turning to dust under the influence of sun and wind, ready to be brushed away. The heights of the Downs shrink in the summer breeze – one more act of sacrifice by creatures that long ago gave their shells to the southern landscape.

The common perception of the South Downs is one of rolling, flower-dazzled grasslands trimmed by sheep. This is partly due to the influence of our neolithic ancestors who crossed from continental Europe some 5000 years ago and settled here, raising animals, clearing trees and growing crops. Until their arrival the hills would have been forested, but they, and the Iron Age settlers who arrived more than 2500 years later, cleared the forests for both agricultural purposes and for fuel, creating the open spaces that are such a feature of the eastern and central Downs today. The Romans too farmed the downland for corn, and grazed their animals on the rich meadows, but following the arrival of

Drifts of wood anemones carpet both woodland and shaw

The Cuckmere's estuary at Cuckmere Haven, with Seaford Head on the far side

As you journey along the South Downs Way, remember it needs your care and respect.

The Countryside Code

Respect everyone

- be considerate to those living in, working in and enjoying the countryside
- leave gates and property as you find them
- do not block access to gateways or driveways when parking
- be nice, say hello, share the space
- follow local signs and keep to marked paths unless wider access is available

Protect the environment

- take your litter home – leave no trace of your visit
- do not light fires and only have BBQs where signs say you can
- always keep dogs under control and in sight
- dog poo – bag it and bin it – any public waste bin will do
- care for nature – do not cause damage or disturbance

Enjoy the outdoors

- check your route and local conditions
- plan your adventure – know what to expect and what you can do
- enjoy your visit, have fun, make a memory

The Countryside Code follows in the wake of principles set by Octavia Hill, a champion of the countryside and a co-founder of the National Trust, who wrote in the early days of the 20th century:

Let the grass growing for hay be respected, let the primrose roots be left in their loveliness in the hedges, the birds unmolested and the gates shut. If those who frequented country places would consider those who live there, they would better deserve, and more often retain, the rights and privileges they enjoy.

STAGE 1

Eastbourne to Alfriston (Footpath route via the Seven Sisters)

Distance	10½ miles (17km)
Time	4–5hr
Maps	Harvey South Downs Way 1:40,000; OS Landranger 199 Eastbourne & Hastings 1:50,000; OS Explorer 123 South Downs Way, Newhaven to Eastbourne 1:25,000
Accommodation	Eastbourne, Beachy Head, Litlington and Alfriston
Refreshments	Eastbourne, Beachy Head, Birling Gap, Exceat, Litlington, Alfriston

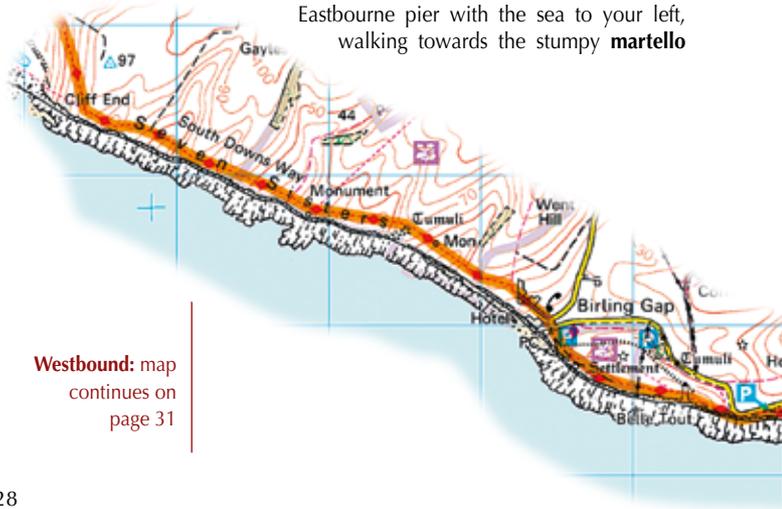

Of the two primary stages leading to Alfriston, this route across Beachy Head and the Seven Sisters is not a dedicated bridleway, but is the official walkers' route – the bridleway alternative goes inland via Jevington, and is described as Stage 1(a) below. It is difficult to say which is the finer option for both have much to commend them. So good are the two options, in fact, that it is tempting to walk each one in due course. The cliff-top region of Heritage Coast above Eastbourne is scenically dramatic, for the surf froths far below and, as you wander across Beachy Head, you have a lovely view ahead to the Seven Sisters, with Seaford Head beyond the estuary of Cuckmere Haven. The inland route, on the other hand, makes a splendid introduction to the Downs with wide open vistas almost every step of the way, while the little community of Jevington visited mid-journey is a typical flint-walled village with an attractive church in gentle surroundings.

The official route begins on the south-western edge of Eastbourne at Holywell. It skirts Whitebread Hole, before climbing a steep slope to Beachy Head, continues across to Birling Gap and then tackles the rise and fall of the Seven Sisters. After leaving Haven Brow, the last of the 'Sisters', the route descends gently to the east bank of the Cuckmere, before cutting off and rising once more, this time over sheep-grazed downland to the site of the former Exceat church, then down to the A259 near the Seven Sisters Visitor Centre. A steep hillside leads to Friston Forest where a fine view shows the lazy windings of the Cuckmere below. Westdean is briefly visited, then it's back to forest again. But once the trees have been left behind high farmland takes the route down to Litlington and the banks of the Cuckmere, which makes a gentle companion for the final approach to Alfriston.

Intro 1: To reach the start of the South Downs Way from Eastbourne railway station, walk along Grove Road passing the Town Hall, and follow Meads Road through the Meads area of town. At the junction of Beachy Head Road take Meads Street which leads past shops and eventually brings you to King Edward's Parade. The walk begins where Dukes Drive makes a sharp right-hand bend. There's a small café at the foot of a steep slope, and a South Downs Way notice-board depicting the route (grid ref: 600972).

Intro 2: To reach the start of the South Downs Way from the promenade, head south away from Eastbourne pier with the sea to your left, walking towards the stumpy martello

Westbound: map continues on page 31

Eastbourne is one of those South Coast resorts that has retained an air of gentility. It's a town of flower beds and bowling greens, a town where Victorian imagery lingers on. The original settlement of East Bourne had a church before the Norman invasion. There were neighbouring hamlets called South Bourne and Sea Houses, the latter a collection of fishermen's cottages, but the three were amalgamated in the mid 19th century, and in 1910 Eastbourne was created a borough. Development as a resort was due largely to the seventh Duke of Devonshire, and it has somehow managed to avoid the tackiness of so many of its coastal neighbours, and discreetly shuns vulgarity. Along the front, north of the pier, stands The Redoubt, a sturdy, circular building – mostly of brick – constructed in the early 1800s as part of the coastal defences against Napoleon. The Wish Tower (see below) also formed part of that defence system.

tower ▶ known as the Wish Tower. Beyond it there are neat lawns and flower beds. The promenade continues towards the cliffs and, as the path rises and brings you to a large landscaped mound with seats, bear right to King Edward's Parade. Turn left to Holywell and, when Dukes Drive bends sharply to the right, you see the start of the South Downs Way directly ahead (grid ref: 600972).

The martello tower, known as the Wish Tower, is the sole survivor of four such towers originally built along Eastbourne's seafront in 1806–7 to keep Napoleon at bay. During the Napoleonic Wars a whole series of these stocky circular towers were erected along the coastline of Kent and Sussex, and named after the Torre del Martello in Napoleon's homeland of Corsica.

Beachy Head is one of the best-known features of the Sussex coast. The clifftop is 536 feet (163m) above the waves, and the red and white ringed lighthouse at its base was built in 1902, the builders and the stone being lowered from the clifftop by cableway. At the start of 1999 a massive rockfall destroyed a section of cliff-face at Beachy Head – a not-so-subtle warning to avoid straying too near the edge. In the severe weather of the early weeks of 2014, more sections of cliff fell into the sea. Britain is shrinking.

Looking east from Haven Brow, the most westerly of the Seven Sisters

Belle Tout lighthouse predates that of Beachy Head. Built in 1832 of Aberdeen granite by 'Mad Jack' Fuller, the eccentric squire of Brightling, it served as the lighthouse for this stretch of coast until 1902, but was replaced because the light would often be lost in fog. It has now been converted to a private luxury B&B (www.belleout.co.uk) with tremendous views in all directions. Following the Beachy Head cliff-fall in 1999, Belle Tout was physically moved a short distance inland.

Start: To start the South Downs Way, turn left behind the café on Dukes Drive and follow the footpath to Whitebread Hole (a sports field). Continue past Whitebread Hole, following the cliffs, while avoiding the left-hand fork to the beach at Cow Gap. Continue along the cliff, with splendid views over the sea, until the path turns to the right up a steep slope. On reaching a junction at the top of the slope, take the path to the left, approaching Beachy Head. Refreshments can be found at the nearby Beachy Head Inn.

Continue along the clifftop, but do not stray too close to the edge as the cliffs are crumbling. The Way slopes down almost to road level below the former lighthouse of Belle Tout, then rises to pass round the inland side of the enclosing wall. Maintain direction across the cliffs, which were acquired by the National Trust in 1967 and form a designated Heritage Coast, and from which the Seven Sisters can be seen ahead. Before long you arrive at the few buildings and car park at Birling Gap (refreshments) (grid ref: 554960).

I was glad then to have chosen to walk westwards, for although the sky was bright and clear, a cold easterly wind was blowing, and I'd rather have that in my back than in my face all day long. On the clifftop walk tiny cow-slips were coming into bloom, but few other flowers as yet. Later, and further inland, there would be plenty of colour around my boots, but up here I was well content with views over the sea, with the bleached roller-coaster of the Seven Sisters ahead with their thatch of downland grass, trim and neatly cropped, and recalled previous clifftop wanderings at the end of a variety of long walks. The pleasure to be gained whilst wandering across the Seven Sisters never palls. There's the cry of gulls, the sight, scent and sound of the sea, and broad vistas of the Downs stretching far away inland. I had the wind in my hair and a hundred miles to cover at my own pace. It was good to be back.

Eastbound: map continues on page 28

A flint track heads past a small toilet block, and soon forks. The way ahead leads to East Dean, but we veer left and through a gate rejoin the clifftop path. The route now wanders over the Seven Sisters on a switch-back course with the sea glistening below to the left and the green baize of the Downs spreading far off to the right – the Crowlink Estate owned by the National Trust. On the first of the ‘Sisters’ an obelisk records the dedication of land to the Trust in memory of two brothers killed in the First World War. Next is Baily’s Hill, followed by Flat Hill, Flagstaff Brow (another dedication stone), Rough Brow, Short Brow and Haven Brow. Between the ‘Sisters’ steep, dry valleys, or ‘bottoms’ can be testing for legs and knees, and the red faces of other walkers betray the effort of each ascent.

From Haven Brow a clear view shows Cuckmere Haven below, with Seaford Head on the far side. The Way slopes down and curves to the right and, on reaching the valley bed, goes through a gate and onto a chalk path, the Cuckmere River just to the left. Immediately after crossing a concrete farm road go through a gate and walk up the slope ahead in a north-easterly direction.

Cuckmere Haven is the estuary of the Cuckmere River, a shingle bank guarded by Haven Brow and Seaford Head. In the 15th century it was more open than it is today, for in 1460 raiders from France sailed up the river to Exceat and attacked the village. (Exceat barely exists as a village today.) During the 18th century the Haven was a notorious landing place for smugglers, when contraband goods would be brought upstream to Exceat and Alfriston. As recently as 1923 smugglers were caught there with a haul of expensive brandy. A little inland from the Haven itself an artificial lagoon attracts assorted waders, while the snaking Cuckmere between Exceat and the Haven is busy with swans, tufted ducks, dabchicks, cormorants and herons.

There is little visible sign of a path, but low waymark posts direct the way to another gate on what is almost the highest point. Through this you approach a stone marking the site of the 11th-century church of Exceat, although there’s nothing of the building to be seen. The Way now veers a little leftwards, heading north-west where a clear path will be found cutting round the hillside above the Cuckmere’s windings, then angles gently down to a gate opposite the Seven Sisters Visitor Centre (refreshments) (grid ref: 519995).

The Cuckmere writhe through its valley on the way to Cuckmere Haven

The Seven Sisters Country Park spreads east of the Cuckmere River and covers an area of 690 acres. Established in 1971 by East Sussex County Council, but managed by the Sussex Downs Conservation Board, the visitor centre is housed in a converted 18th-century barn at Exceat. The centre has an interesting wildlife and local history exhibition, a shop and toilets. Next door is a convenient restaurant.

Westdean is a historic little place. It is said that Alfred the Great built a palace here in AD 850, although no trace of it has been found. But there is a charming flint-built rectory dating from the 13th century, and a part-Norman church. Although very small, and with an air of seclusion, Westdean is worth exploring at leisure.

Friston Forest covers almost 2000 acres of mainly broad-leaved woodlands. It is owned by South East Water, but managed by the Forestry Commission, and there are several paths and rides through it.

Charleston Manor, on the edge of Friston Forest, is named in the Domesday Book as being owned by William the Conqueror's cup-bearer, Cerlestone. In the grounds the restored tithe barn is all of 177 feet (54m) long, with an enormous tiled roof and a medieval circular dovecote. The house and gardens are open to the public on set days during the summer.

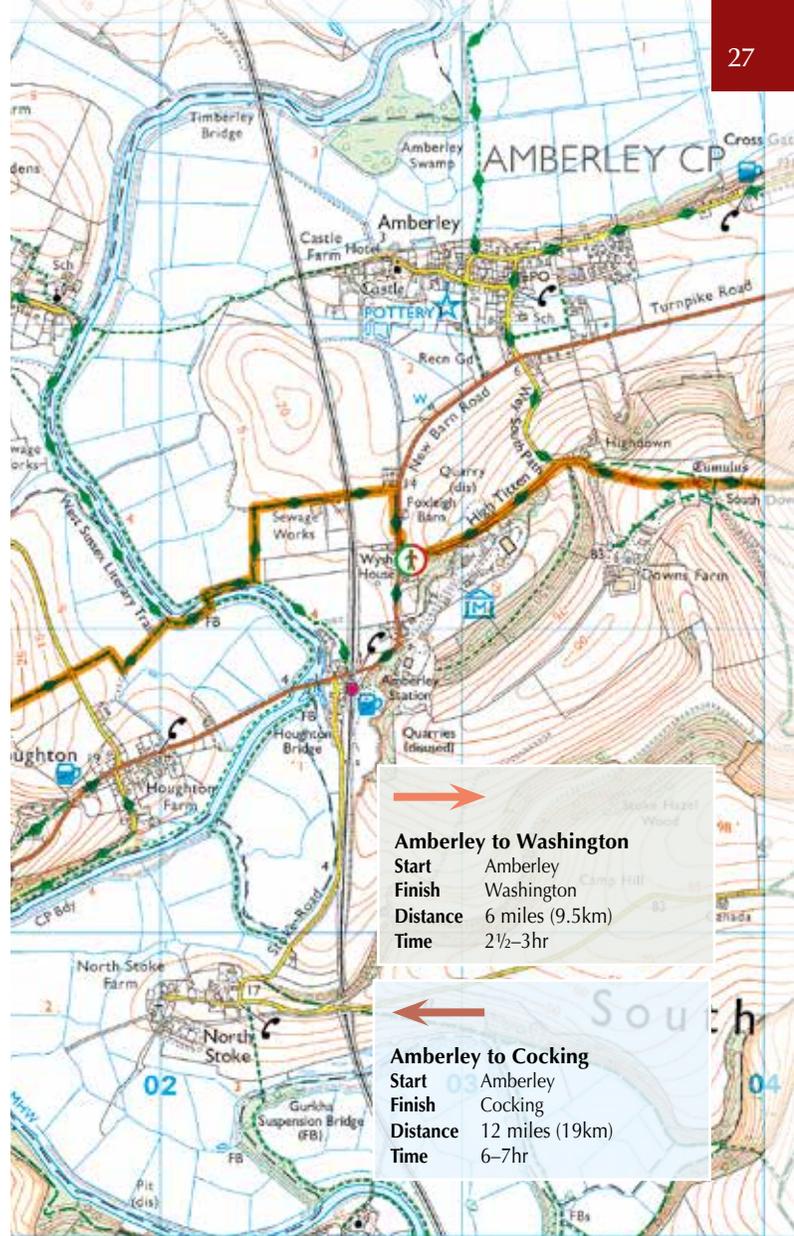

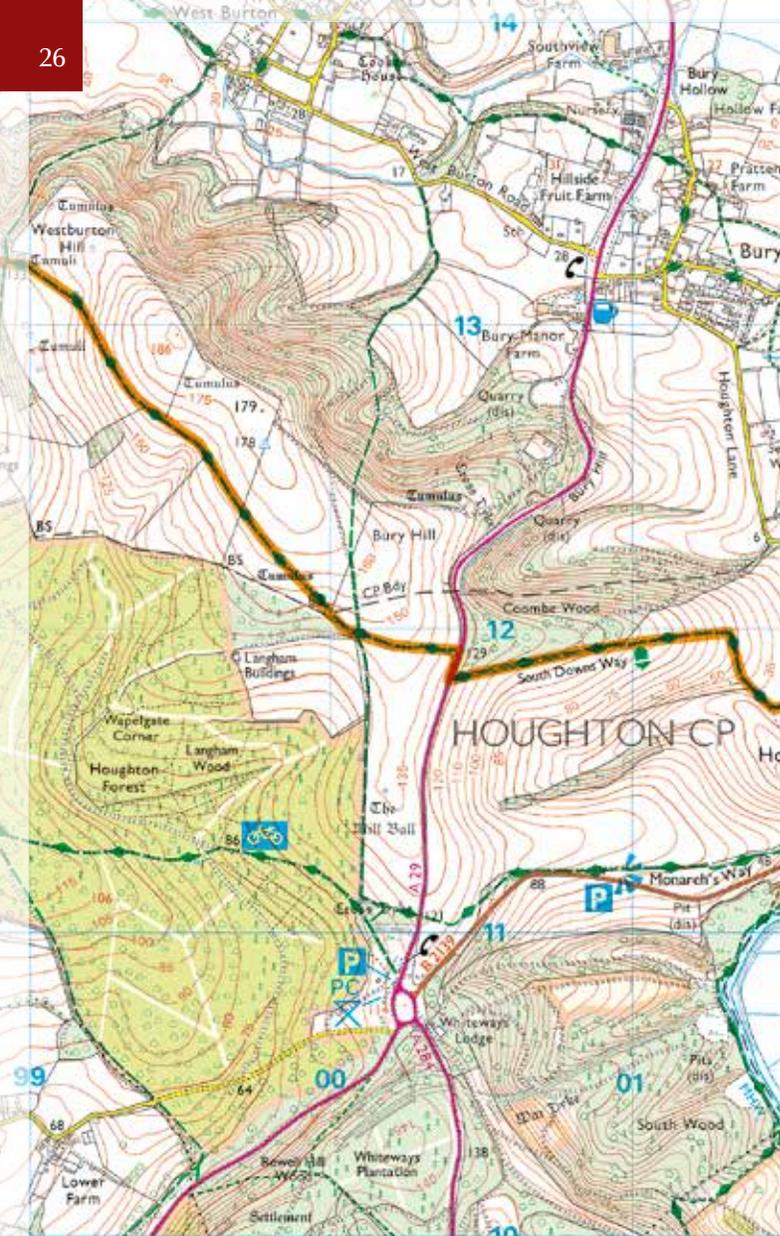

Cross the A259 with care and wander between a cycle hire building and a cottage, then through a kissing gate and up a steep grass slope, at the top of which a stone stile leads through a wall to the edge of Friston Forest. ◀ There's a very fine view from here, out to the Cuckmere's valley easing towards Cuckmere Haven. Take the path ahead among trees, and soon descend nearly 100 steps to the hamlet of Westdean which is reached beside an attractive duck pond. Continue ahead along a narrow road which becomes a track, and re-enter Friston Forest. Waymarks direct the South Downs Way to the left, but on coming to a junction of tracks, turn right, and when this bears sharp right near the forest edge, the Way goes ahead and descends more steps among trees behind Charleston Manor. ◀

The South Downs Way continues along a beech-lined track, then you veer right to cross a stile and follow a hedge. On the downland slopes to the west, a white horse can be seen cut in the chalk above the Cuckmere Valley, on the hill known as High and Over. Eventually come down to the flint-walled village of Litlington (refreshments, accommodation). Turn right in the village street as far as The Plough and Harrow pub. Just beyond this turn left along a narrow footpath leading to a bridge over the Cuckmere.

The continuing South Downs Way turns right and follows the Cuckmere upstream, passing opposite the Clergy House and Alfriston parish church, to a bridge with white railings where the footpath route joins the bridleway (grid ref: 523031). Cross the bridge, turn right into River Lane, which then turns left. On reaching Alfriston High Street (refreshments, accommodation) turn right to The Star Inn.

Alfriston is something of a show-piece village, and is one of the busiest in Sussex with day-visitors. It boasts many interesting and picturesque buildings, a number of which have typical downland flint walls. The George Inn (built 1397) is said to have been a smugglers' haunt, while The Star Inn, which dates from the 15th century, bears the figurehead of a Dutch ship that foundered in Cuckmere Haven. The 14th-century church of St Andrew, standing between the greensward of The Tye and the Cuckmere River, is often referred to as 'the Cathedral of the Downs'. Nearby the thatched, half-timbered Clergy House is of similar age to the church, and was the first building bought (in 1896) by the National Trust – for just £10! Alfriston has several shops, restaurants, pubs and tearooms, and a choice of accommodation.

Litlington is tucked under the Downs on the east bank of the Cuckmere, its small Norman church wearing a white weatherboarded bell-tower and a shingled cap. Next door Church Farm is also very old, and has Caen stone in its walls, which leads some to suggest it may have been a priest's house. The name of the village is derived from 'Lytela's farmstead' and is pronounced Lillington.

→ Amberley to Washington

Start Amberley
 Finish Washington
 Distance 6 miles (9.5km)
 Time 2½-3hr

← Amberley to Cocking

Start Amberley
 Finish Cocking
 Distance 12 miles (19km)
 Time 6-7hr

- popular National Trail • 100 miles (160km) in 12 day stages
- entirely within the South Downs National Park
- described in both directions

The South Downs Way National Trail is a glorious 100-mile (160km) national trail between Winchester and Eastbourne, passing entirely through the South Downs National Park.

The route follows the northern escarpment for much of the way and rarely descends to habitation except where river valleys interrupt the regular course of the Downs.

Generally easy underfoot, the Way links many ancient and historical tracks, fine wooded areas, delightful river valleys and lovely villages.

- highlights include Beachy Head, the Long Man of Wilmington, Ditchling Beacon, Clayton Windmills, Butser Hill and Winchester
- waymarked bridleway with very few stiles, few towns or villages en route, in 12 daily stages (no more than 12 miles)
- the trail can be walked at any time of year
- separate 1:25,000 OS map booklet included with this book

CICERONE
www.cicerone.co.uk

WALKING | SOUTHERN ENGLAND

US $27.95

ISBN 978-1-85281-161-0

9 781786 311610

UK £17.95